WE ARE GROWING OLD.

We are growing old! how the thought will rise,
When a glance is backward cast
On some long-remembered spot that lies
In the silence of the past!

It may be the shrine of our early vows,
On the tomb of our early tears;
But it seems like a far-off isle to us
In the stormy sea of years.

Oh! wide and wild are the waves that part
Our steps from its greenness now,
And we miss the joy of many a heart
And the light of many a brow;

For deep o'er many a stately barque
Have the whelming billows rolled,
That steered with us from that early mark:
O friends! we are growing old.

Old in the dimness of the dust
Of our daily toils and cares;
Old in the wrecks of love and trust
Which our burdened memory bears.

Each form may wear, to the passing gaze,
The bloom of life's freshness yet;
And beams may brighten our latter days
Which the morning never met:

But, oh the changes we have seen
In the far and winding way;
The graves in our paths that have grown green,
And the locks that have grown gray!

The winters still on our way may spare
The sable or the gold;
But we see their snows upon brighter hair,
And friends, we are growing old.

We've gained the world's cold wisdom now,
We have learned to praise and fear;
But where are the living founts whose flow
Was a joy of hearts to hear?

We have won the wealth of many a clime,
And the lore of many a page;
But where is the hope that saw in time
But its boundless heritage?

Will it come again when the violet wakes,
And the woods their youth renew?
We have stood in the light of sunny brakes
Where the bloom is deep and blue.

And our souls might joy in the spring-time then;
But the joy was faint and cold,
For it never could give us the youth again
Of hearts that are growing old.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

BY TRAVE.

"I will learn you, you dirty scoundrel;" thus remarked Mr. Bell as he withdrew a No. 10 from the extremity of Bill Jones' coat-tail.

Mr. B. was a good citizen, and was highly favored by the Creator in many respects, yet he lacked one great object, the government of temper.

Bill Jones was a young man of six teen years—one of Nature's beautiful. He possessed a reputable character as well as ability unexhibited and unequaled by any other young man in the community.

The town in which they resided had a Literary Association. One of its principal requirements was the reading of a manuscript paper, weekly.—Ed Preston was appointed editor for the approaching week, and called on many of his fellow members, among whom was Bill Jones, for communications. Bill was the first to comply.—He prepared the following:

"DIED.

"Sometime between the commencement of time and the closing of last week, a young bawling quadruped of D. Bell's, aged about as many months again as half and about the same number of days, more or less. This animal came into existence and bore prospects of long life as well as any other animal of the same kind, but finally came to its destination by the stoppage of breathing. The cows and other domestics of the farm-yard are requested to attend the hauling out which will take place somewhere between the rising and setting of the sun.

"Poor calfy lived and died again,
Before it reached the age of ten;
It kicked and bawled and bawled its last,
And now its living days are past."

Of course it was read at the next assembling of the Association. Mr. Bell, being present, was terribly offended, and determined to chastise the young urchin, as he termed Jones.—What course to pursue was the query with Bell. At last he decided that Abraham, his eldest son, should retaliate by replying in the next issue.—Now, Abraham was a tall, robust figure, face covered with beard, of inferior ability to Jones, and possessed some influence among the ladies, which he exercised largely in the company of Josephine Dudley, which was oftenor than occasionally.

Josephine lived in the same town Jones and Bell did, which was known by the "Station."

The next evening for the meeting of the Association arrived. Abraham, with paternal assistance, considered himself ready for the occasion. It being generally understood that sport was brewing between Jones and Bell the attendance was larger than usual.

His communication was poetically composed and entitled "Magnificent." Several insulting insinuations were adhered to. Jones was mentioned personally and a great effort was made to raise a laugh on the epitaph of calfy.

After the reading, remarks were called for. Many ideas having been advanced, Jones occupied the floor, and poured forth the following effusion:

"I would inform the Association
Of a genius at the Station,
A long-legged, hairy gent,
That wrote a piece 'Magnificent,'
And tried his best to raise a laugh
On little calfy's epitaph.
I have no doubt he sprained his brain
To get his thoughts in such a train;
To have them on the paper wrote;
To show that he was born a shoat;
To show to this Association
That he was troubled with irritation.
How strange, that such a solid mass
Would try to imitate an ass.
But, Abraham, I'd tell you here
You need the ass's lengthy ear,
And I would have you bear in mind
You need the ass's tail behind.
Now, let me tell you, as a friend,
Never to such things attend;
Always try, to others do
As you would have them do to you;
Never try two things at once—
Never imitate a dunce.
Then, the best advice of mine
Is, go and see your Josephine."

We will let the reader imagine the sensation of the Association.

It was after the Society adjourned and on the way homeward that the difficulty occurred which I mentioned in the beginning of my narrative.

The result was, Bells and Joneses at enmity with each other. Week after week passed, but the Bells did not speak to the Joneses, neither did the Jones speak to the Bells. Inconvenience frequently ensued. If a tea party was given by any of the elite of the country, the company of the one was solicited as well as the other. If any of the family of the one would attend, the other would learn it and remain away. Indeed, so great was the enmity towards each other, that neither would attend nor contribute to the Society of the Poor, to which they had always attended regularly and contributed liberally. What the one would be connected with the other would oppose. If one dealt at the store on the corner the other would go to the store up town, or if one employed Dr. B the other would call in Dr. G. So extensively did enmity exist between them that it became the general gossip, and numerous were the ways and means devised to procure peace and friendly feeling, but all failed.

Now, respecting the financial affairs and position in the community, Bell, Sr., could not boast over Jones, Sr.—Both were wealthy and equally situated. Even the families numbered the same—four of each.

Miss Emma Bell was about entering her teens. She possessed a very refined and elegant appearance for so young a madamoiselle; had attended the village school until her eleventh year, since then at the seminary of H., where she purposed remaining until that institution would confer the honor of graduation. Her intellectual ability was superior to Abraham's, consequently, more expense and greater care were exercised in her moral and intellectual training.

Clara Jones was a young lady of very amiable ability, refined manners and polished education. She was an expert in all she undertook, from the maid in the kitchen to the lady in the parlor. She was accomplished. Her suitors were numerous and report was already current that she was engaged. Nobody knew the appointed day.

During the oil excitement in western Pennsylvania, Bell became so deeply involved in stock that his presence was necessary; consequently, he removed thither.

Two years later, Jones moved his family to D—— county, Wis., where he had invested extensively in lands, which of late years, had increased considerably in value.

Ten years later, I took a trip to the "Land of Lakes" for the purpose of prospecting and while there called on my old friend Jones. Of course, I was anxious to hear of Bill and was glad to learn that he lived in the same town and on the same street Jones, Sr., did.

"After dinner we will go up and see William," said Jones, Sr.

The hour at hand we were at Bill's—the old familiar name sounds the best—and imagine my surprise when receiving an introduction to Mrs. Jones—Bill's wife—formerly Miss Emma Bell. It was with difficulty that I could realize it.

"That is not the cream of the joke, Trave," remarked Bill. "This evening we will cross to the other side of the lake and see Abraham."

"Abraham Bell?" asked I.

"Yes," answered Bill.

"Is he married?" I asked.

"Why, are you that far behind the times?" responded Bill. "He has been married nearly four years, and they have three babies."

"Three babies! why, who did he marry?" I exclaimed.

"Sister Clara," he answered.

"Is it possible!" I exclaimed again, with astonishment.

"Yes, to-morrow, when at leisure, I will relate the circumstances, particularly, to you."

I awaited anxiously the arrival of the time. It came, and Bill, according to promise, proceeded:

"Trave, take my telescope and look down the country about three miles."

I looked.

"Do you see that reddish-looking house?" he asked.

I answered affirmatively.

"That's where Samuel Bell resides," continued Bill. He is the brother of our enemy at the Station, and owns all the land within five miles square, extending one mile on this side of that house and four miles on the other.—That is one mile east and four miles west, and about two and three-quarters north and one and one-quarter south. That white house you observe is where our "oil speculator" lives. He fizzled when he was boring for the oleaginous matter. When we moved here we owned all that land of Samuel Bell's, in addition to what we have now. Two years after we came here Samuel purchased and built immediately. The third year he brought his family, and we have been on most intimate terms."

"During the fourth year the white house was built. And just five years from the time we left the Station, my father-in-law occupied the white mansion. I presume my astonishment at that time was equal to yours yesterday.

"During the greater part of the summer before they moved, Emma was at her uncle's and I formed a new acquaintance."

"Did she graduate at H.? I asked.

"O, yes, just one year before her father became insolvent," he answered.

"Well it seems strange, but how does it come that Abe married Clara? It was rumored she was engaged, when at the Station."

"So she was. Poor Ed! he died with a singular disease."

"Ed Preston you have reference to, I presume?"

"Yes. The physicians couldn't do anything for him. Poor Clara! I pitied her, but "All's well that ends well."

"Is Abe in business?" I inquired.

"Yes, indeed, very extensively.—Didn't you notice that large brick store-room on the corner below father's?" he asked.

"Yes," I replied.

"Well, he is in the mercantile business there. That stone-building store and a tract of one hundred acres of land north of town, are in his name, but more than the half of it belongs to the old gentleman. That's their own business, you know."

MARRIAGE SHORN OF POETRY.—The Rev. D., a Methodist minister, stationed at Meadville, Pa, some years ago, one evening received a note informing him that a couple living in the suburbs of the city desired to be united in the bonds of matrimony, and requested his services at nine o'clock in the morning. At the proper time he went to the house designated. He inquired of a young lady, who was busy washing dishes if there was a couple there who wished to be married.

"I am the lady," said she, blushing. "John will be in in a moment."

The minister was surprised to see no preparations, and so stepped to the door to view the surroundings. Two men were hard at work grinding scythes in the yard, and another, who proved to be the "John," was tending a cow and calf. The young lady came to the door pretty soon and shouted:

"John, John, hurry; the preacher's here!"

John leaped the fence and rushed to the house, the girl wiped her hands on her apron, and after joining hands, said they were ready. The minister proceeded and had just got through questioning the young man when the old lady rushed into the room, shouting:

"John, John, you didn't turn the cow away from the calf?

He let go his sweetheart's hand instantly, and rushed into the barnyard, put the old cow through the bars, and then returned to the house, again took his position, when the remainder of the ceremony was performed. The minister went on his way, John went to the hay fields, and the lady resumed her dish-washing.—Forest (Pa) Republican.

Teaching from House to House.

"Let me make you acquainted" is the American formula for which Europeans substitute "Allow me to introduce." Each has its advantages; each is characteristic. Introduction in America implies acquaintance, at least, possible; but it does not in Europe.

We ministers need to go to the houses of our people, that they may be assured we are in earnest about them. They do not wonder if we talk earnestly when a congregation is before us. Most men feel the stimulus of a crowd. But, if they find us in their houses as much in earnest about a family or an individual as in the pulpit, they will begin to believe in us and in the religion we represent. It is thus that the old law realizes itself:—"A house-going minister makes a church-going people."

We ministers must go to the people in their houses, that they may know us. What an idea a man who works very hard all the week has of the minister whom he never sees but in the pulpit and never hears but in the declaration of divine truth! He comes to think him a sublimated, ethereal person, who walks without touching earth, without passions, feelings, except official, or sympathies. So, also, in some way of her own, thinks his wife. And both consider that it is all very nice for him to talk so at the height of his pulpit; but if he were like them, and had to come down to their life, he would find it another affair entirely. And as for the children, they are apt to regard a minister as a being between whom and them there there is a great gulf fixed, which could only be bridged over by their going to college and seminary, when they grow to be men, and then getting ordained—whatever that may mean.—But if we go as kindly, plain, sensible men, "without any nousense," and see the family in their own house, talk to them, enter into their life, and bring our Sabbath message to them in their own tongue wherein they were born, they come into sympathy with us, learn to feel that after all religion had to work in us on much the same material as in them.—Rev. John Hall.

An editor of a paper informed his readers that the ladies always pull off the left stocking last. This, as may be supposed, created some stir among the fair readers, and while in positive terms they denied the statement, they insisted that he had no business to know it, even if such were the fact, and pronounced him no gentleman. He proves it, however, by a short argument: "When one stocking is pulled off there is another left on; pulling off this is taking the left stocking off last."

Cut Behind.

BY REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

Scene: A crisp morning. Carriage with spinning wheels, whose spokes glisten like splinters of the sun. Roan horse, flecked with foam, bending into the bit, his polished feet drumming the pavement in challenge of any horse that thinks he can go as fast. Two boys running to get on the back of the carriage. One of them with quick spring succeeds. The other leaps, but falls and falls on the part of the body where it is most appropriate to fall.—No sooner had he struck the ground than he shouts to the driver of the carriage, "Cut behind!"

Human nature the same in boy as man. All running to gain the vehicle of success. Some are spry, and gain that for which they strive. Others are slow, and tumble down; they who fall crying out against those who mount, "Cut behind!"

A political officer rolls past. A multitude spring to their feet, and the race is in. Only one of all the number reaches that for which he runs. No sooner does he gain the prize, and begin to wipe the sweat from his brow, and think how grand a thing it is to ride in popular preferment, than the disappointed candidates cry out; "Incompetency! Stupidity! Fraud! Now let the newspapers and platforms of the country, "Cut behind!"

There is a golden chariot of wealth rolling down the street. A thousand people are trying to catch it. They run. They jostle. They tread on each other. Push and pull, and tug! Those talk most against riches who cannot get them. Clear the track for the racers! One of the thousand reaches the golden prize and mounts. Forthwith the air is full of cries: "Got it by fraud! Shoddy! Petroleum aristocracy! His father was a ragpicker! His mother was a washerwoman! I knew him when he blackened his own shoes! Pitch him off the back part of the golden chariot! Cut behind! Cut behind!"

It is strange there should be any rivalries among the ministers of religion, when there is so much room for all to work. But in some things they are much like others. Like all other classes of men, they have one liver apiece, and here and there of them a spleen. In all cases the epigastric region is higher up than the hypogastric, save in the act of turning somerset. Like others, they eat three times a day when they can get anything to eat.—Besides this, it sometimes happens that we find them racing for some profession, chair or pulpit. They run well—neck and neck—while churches look on and wonder whether it will be "Dexter" or the "American Girl."—Rowels plunge deep and fierce is the cry. "Go long! Go long!" The privilege of preaching the Gospel to the poor on five thousand dollars a year is enough to make a tight race anywhere. But only one mounts the coveted place; and forthwith the cry goes up in the associations and synods: "Unfit for the place! Can't preach! Unsound in faith! Now is your chance, oh, conferences and presbyteries, to Cut Behind!"

A fair woman passes. We all admire beauty. He that says he don't lies. A canting man, who told me he had no admiration for anything earthly, used instead of listening the sermon to keep squinting overboard the pew where sat Squire Brown's daughter.—Whether God plants a rose in parterre or human cheek, we must admire it, whether we will or not.—While we are deciding whether we had better take that dahlia, the dahlia takes us. A star does not ask the astronomer to admire it; but just winks at him, and he surrenders, with all his telescopes. This fair woman in society has many satellites. The boys all run for the prize. One of them, not having read enough novels to learn that ugliness is more desirable than beauty, wins her. The cry is up:—"She paints! Looks well; but she knows it. Good shape, but I wonder what is the price of cotton! Won't she make him stand around! Practicability worth more than black eyes! Fool to marry, a virago!"

In many eyes success is a crime. "I do not like you," said the snowflake to the snowbird. "Why?" said the snowbird. "Because," said the snowflake, "you are going up, and I am going down!"

We have to state that the man in the carriage on the crisp morning, though he had a long whip-lash with which he could have made the climbing boy yell most lustily, did not cut behind. He was an old man; in the corner of his mouth a smile, which was always as ready to play as a kitten that watches for some one with a string to offer the slightest inducement. He heard the shout in the rear, and said "Good morning, my son. That is right; climb over and sit by me. Here are the reins; take hold and drive. Was a boy myself once, and I know what tickles youngsters."

Thank God there are so many in the world that never "cut behind," but are ready to give a fellow a ride whenever he wants it. Here is a young man, clerk in a store. He has small wages, and a mother to take care of. For ten years he struggles to get in a higher place. The first of January comes, and the head of the commercial house looks round and says, "Trying to get up, are you?" And by the time three more years have passed, the boy sits right beside the old man who hands over the reins, "Drive!" for the old merchant knew what would tickle the youngster. Jonathan Goodhue was a boy behind the counter; but his employer gave him a ride, and London, Canton and Calcutta heard the scratch of his pen.—Lenox, Grinnell, and the Aspinwalls carried many young men a mile on the high road of prosperity. There are hundreds of people whose chief joy is to help others on. Now it is a smile, now a good word, now ten dollars. Many such a kind man always have a carriage to ride in and a horse not too skittish.—As he goes down the hill of life, may the breeching strap be strong enough to hold back the load. When he has ridden to the end of the earthly road, he will have plenty of friends to help him unhitch and assist him out of the carriage. On that cool night it will be pleasant to hang up the whip with which he drove the enterprises of a lifetime, and feel that with it he never "cut behind" at those who were struggling.

Where the Wages Go-Sober Thoughts for Workingmen.

Why is it that so many of the families of the laboring men in our towns and cities live in such a poor beggarly way, and in so many damp, dark basements, and up-in-such close, confined, ricketty old attics? Many of the heads of these families receive good wages, and get their pay every week or month regularly. But where in too many cases, do their wages go to? Not to the baker, the grocer, the butcher, the merchant; they go for strong drink, ale and beer, which do not strengthen the physical man.—Franklin taught the printers of London that cold water was better than ale; and cold water has lost none of its virtues in 140 years.

The cost of tippling is in the aggregate enormous. The inquiry is often made, how are so many drinking houses sustained? Let us see. Twenty men, at 30 cents a day, will pay one of the "tippling shops" $2,190 a year. A man who pays thirty cents a day for "drinks," pays $109 50 a year. This is the interest on $1,564 at 7 per cent. at simple interest. This sum, 30 cents a day, amounts in ten years to $1,171 95. All this is wasted, paid out for "an enemy that steals away a man's brains," and robs him and his family of every comfort. Intoxicating liquors give neither strength to the body, vigor to the mind, resolution to the will, elevation to the morals nor dignity to the character. Strong drink drags a man down from his high estate, depraves all his appetites, and leaves him in want and misery, the mere wreck and semblance of a man.

The constant use of intoxicating liquors makes hard times for many a man; thus, a family of five persons will consume four barrels of flour a year, or 1,056 pounds of bread. This is nearly three pounds a day. Good flour can be bought now at $7 a barrel; four times seven makes $28; and thirty cents a day for drinks is $109 50, or $82,50 more per year than the bread for a family of five persons costs. "But," says A., "I only take two drinks a day." Very well, you pay then for your drinks $73 a year only $45 more than you pay for the bread consumed by your whole family if it contains five persons. This sum would provide tea and coffee for them.

Here, then, we see that the man who pays even twenty cents a day for liquor spends a sum sufficient to supply his family with bread, tea and coffee for the year. Is it strange that times are hard—that men complain of the Government, and charge that it oppresses them with onerous taxes? The above figures show how men tax themselves; and how they tax property too.

In 1868 the Inebriate Asylum cost the tax payers of this city $144,472,40. While the amount of money paid by the city for flour for all its hospitals, asylums, and for the relief of the poor, was only $102,573 38.

The outdoor poor cost the city, in 1868, $122,228 64. How much of this could be charged to intemperance?

The number of persons committed to the workhouse in this city in 1868 was 15,738. The Commissioners say, "a considerable proportion of the committals is for intoxication." The police stations, the prisons, the almhouses, the penitentiary, the miserable homes, all tell of the work of intemperance. It is the great curse of the land—it feeds upon the wages of labor, and like the horseleech's daughter, "it cries give, give," until all is gone, of health, character, life.—N. Y. Post.

THE SECRET.—"Mother," said a child ten years of age, "I want to know the secret of your going away alone every night and morning?"

"Why, my child?"

"Because it must be to see some one you love very much."

"And what leads you to think so?"

"Because I always notice that when you come back you appear to be more happy than usual."

"Well, suppose I do go and see a Friend I love very much, and that after seeing Him and conversing with Him, I am more happy that before, why should you wish to know anything about it?"

"Because I wish to do as you do, that I may be happy too."

"Well, my child, when I leave you in the morning and evening it is to commune with my Saviour; I go to ask him for his grace to make me holy and happy. I ask him to assist me in all the duties of the day, and especially to keep me from committing any sin against him, and above all I ask him to have mercy on you, and save you from the miseries of those who sin against him."

"O, that is the secret!" said the child; then I must go with you."

The "Globe" has the largest number of readers of any other paper published in the county. Advertisers should remember this.

☞ We stated last week that a negro, named W. H. Revels, was elected a U. S. Senator by the Mississippi Legislature. We now have it to state that the law is such that a person must be a citizen nine years before he can have such a position, and this, it is thought, will cut Mr. Revels out.

☞ The Legislature has been in session a month—nothing done but quarrelling over individual jobs. The talk about the "Record" has already cost the State more than the printing of the Record would have done. It seems to us that members ought to be able to say yes or no, and that be the end of it.

☞ We see by the Harrisburg correspondence of the Blair County Radical that one of our active guerrillas is an applicant for an appointment from Gov. Geary. Possibly Geary will want to know his party standing at home from others than guerrillas—and then he will get the appointment—"in a born."

☞ This Senatorial district, composed of the counties of Centre, Blair, Huntingdon, Mifflin, Juniata and Perry, will be in the battle-field next fall. If it goes Republican, the Republican party will have a majority in the Senate—if the Democrats elect their candidates, the Democratic party will have a majority in the Senate. It is time for true party Republicans to look around for good candidates.

FIFTEEN thousand colored men will vote at the next general election in this State.

A BILL has been introduced in the State Senate to add two judges to the Supreme Court of the State. Our State population is growing larger, crime and suits are multiplying. Judge's duties are onerous, and the change, while it would not speak well for the State's necessity, would be advantageous to the sitting Judges.

LOUIS M. GOTTSCHALK, the celebrated pianist and composer, while giving a monster concert at Rio Janerio, fell senseless at his instrument during the performance of his favorite composition, "La Morte." He was taken to Tijuca, where he lingered three weeks, and expired on the 18th of December.

THE question of granting Mrs. Lincoln a pension was again before Congress. It is now proposed to give her two thousand dollars per annum.—We don't think Mrs. Lincoln, judging from what is said of her conduct, is deserving of such pension; but if she must have something, for the sake of the Republic, and in behalf of the children of Abraham Lincoln, we would say let her have no more or no less than is now given as pensions to the widows of deceased soldiers. More than this would be culpable extravagance; or if she does get the sum proposed, let every Union soldier's widow in the land get the same.

An illustration of the operation of the franking privilege is given by the Davenport (Iowa) Gazette. On the evening of the 15th inst., there arrived in the post office of that city a registered letter, duly franked, in the shape of a large canvas-covered trunk weighing at least three hundred and fifty pounds. It was mailed at Washington and directed to San Francisco.

News has been received of the total destruction by an earthquake, on December 28th, of the town of Santo Maura, on one of the Ionian isles of that name. At the date of the advices, January 1, ten dead and fifty wounded had been taken from the ruins. Not a house was left standing, and the survivors slept in the open air or under tents.

The military strength of the Mormons is estimated at 25,000, and they drill every Saturday afternoon. Congress has in contemplation some legislation with regard to them, which may result in a slight skirmish, and a breaking up of the Mormon camp.

Boston feeds its poor with soup paid out of the public funds. A good idea; for then all help to contribute to the wants of the poorer classes, and no one individual can boast of his liberality.

A Plain President.

We doubt if the White House ever had an occupant who, in his leading traits and habits more truly represented the great mass of the people than President Grant. Instead of exhibiting the formation and prejudices of the army, as many had predicted, or still less, the characteristices of a lover of horses and high living, as others had charged, President Grant has shown himself to be a plain, accesible, modest methodical man of business, who aims to do his duty in the most quiet manner. He has about him no hangers-on, no favored cliques, no kitchen cabinets. No lobbyists have run of the Executive mansion, or boast of their influence at headquarters. Whatever citizen has business with the Chief Magistrate, has an even chance of approaching him during business hours, and of having his wishes respectfully listened to. He will not run the gauntlet of files of supercillious attendants, or be whirled through the mazes of the circumlocution office. He will come directly to a plain man, and will get direct answers to every proper question he puts.

As to the management of his time, President Grant consults his own judgment, instead of his thousand and one advisers. As he traveled to suit himself during vacation, so he appears to have arranged his daily habits at Washington with a like independence. After a long morning walk by himself he is ready to begin office work at nine o'clock, continuing until three. By four o'clock at the latest, all visitors have retired, and the White House is now closed for the day. After dinner the President drive his family out, taking the reins himself, and, as much as has been said of his fondness for horses, his equipage is among the most modest in Washington. In the evening friends and acquaintances find the President in the parlor with his family.

On the Sabbath the order and stillness of any private household reigns throughout the Executive mansion. These are homely details, to be sure but they are quite unlike what has been witnessed at the residence of the nation's chief magistrate even within a short time. They have an immense influence, too, upon the morals of the country; for though we trust that the toadying attention of court circle will never be known here, the social power of the Capital and of its great officials is necessarily extensive. Had Generals Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, and Thomas been arrogantf conceited and corrupt men, their bad influence upon the young would have been immeasurable. Particularly would this have been the case with respect to him who in addition to the first military honors, received the highest distinction in the gift of the people. As it is, these apprehensions are turned into grateful admiration as we contemplate the orderly and examplary life of our President.

Evidently the man's heart is in the right place, and his head is yet unaffected by the adulations of power, when he can say, as he recently said to some Western friends, who asked him if he recollected a certain lady in St. Louis: "Oh, yes, I remember her well. She was a charming woman.—The last time I saw her I delivered her a load of wood."—Boston Journal.

Five prisoners recently made their escape from the jail in Uniontown, Pa. by prying the iron-grated window out of the second story, stepping on the wall, and jumping to the ground, a distance of eighteen feet.

Blairsville, Pa., is the scene of excitement in consequence of the temperance men prosecuting five liquor sellers, who were imprisoned. They and their friends vowed vengeance on the prosecutors and they have partly carried their threats into execution.—Two barns, belonging to prominent temperance men were burned to the ground, and all their contents, including four horses and eleven head of cattle, destroyed.

A happy groom at "Glen White," coal mine, two miles west of Kittaning Point, on the line of the Pennsylvania railroad, was recently congratulated on his wedding evening by a ride on a rail. He was taken out of his bed, carried out of his house, set astride of a rail, and made a public exhibition of by being presented at every door in the neighborhood. He married a grass widow who has two husbands living, and he himself having a wife living.

When an Arab woman intends marrying again after the death of her husband she goes the night before the ceremony to pay a visit to his grave. There she kneels and prays him not to be offended—not to be jealous. As however, she feels he will be offended and jealous, the widow brings with her a donkey laden with two goat's skins of water. The prayer ended, she proceeds to pour the water on the grave, to keep the first husband cool under the circumstances about to take place and having well saturated him, she departs.

CRANBERRIES A CURE FOR CANCER.—The Tuscaloosa (Ala.) Observer says: "We have stated more than once that the common cranberry was efficacious in the cure of cancer; but we have never until very recently been an eye witness to the fact. Mr. Middleton Belk, residing within four or five miles of this city, who was afflicted with a cancer on the nose, for eight years, was induced to try cranberries as a poultice, and to his great joy and satisfaction, he experienced a perfect and radical cure."

ORBISONIA, JANUARY 1870.

Editors of Globe: If the New Year and new decade but shower down blessings upon our land and people as 1870 has been giving its pattering rains to swell the brooks and river, we should of all people be most happy.

Orbisonia still stands, or more properly stands still, for years and decades seem rather as clogs than as driving power to its wheels Humanity does not "sweep onward" here, as is indicated by the fact that old Mr. Time has never presented any bill of brooms, which would evidently be done if the old gentleman had done any business in our community. Society is dead—perfectly dead. In fact Orbisonia is one of those fogyish, old, sober-sides, which nought but politics can move to any decided action. Even this agitation it is being endeavored to calm, now that the real "secret ring," has been exposed; but people will not so soon forget. Temperance and religion combined fail to disturb the equilibrium of our town to any great extent. On the evening of the 7th inst., the Good Templars of this place gave a public entertainment in the U. B Church, for the purpose of obtaining names to the petitions for the "Local Option" law. Addresses were delivered by E. Trimbath and J. R. Baker, essays read by Misses Mollie Blake and Amanda Rinker. "Why are some persons afraid of secret societies?" answered by G. S. Baker; vocal and instrumental music by Misses Hawker, of Shirleysburg, and W. R. Baker, and the reading of the "Temperance Messenger" closed the exercises. The meeting was somewhat annoyed by rowdies which caused the G. T's. to be censured by a few individuals—to use a very mild expression—who claim that temperance meetings should not be held in the churches! But the well disposed citizens think differently and eagerly sign the petitions. It is to be hoped that the day-star of Temperance is rising. "Local Option" if granted, as it undoubtedly will be this winter notwithstanding its alleged unconstitutionality, will pave the way for a better public sentiment, and the final triumph of right, in the old Keystone. The Buffalo and Washington R. R. has not been to see us yet, and we very much fear, will not come soon, yet until it does (or something equally enlivening) we can scarcely hope to exert an appreciable force upon the Archimedean lever that is to move the world. Nevertheless we will "Learn to labor and to wait," hoping that at some day in the dim distant future, our village shall rise from a Phenix grave, to bask in the sunlight of truth and enlightenment.

RELSIE.

Messrs Editors:—The citizens of this part of the county are holding a series of Temperance meetings, and discussing that great and alarming question fairly, openly and, we think, impartially, before the people. The primary object of these meetings is to prepare the minds of the people for a petition praying the Legislature for a general law to enable the voters of any township or ward to determine, by ballot, whether drinking houses may or may not be licensed within such districts. The meetings, to the present, have been addressed by Revs. McCune, Adair, Gwynn, and Ely.

There is a child in this place, only two years old, that imagines he has a girl for a playmate, a watch, and his pocket full of chestnuts, and amuses himself for hours with his images. He is a very smart lad, and if he lives will some day make his mark in the world.

An editor thus pleasantly chronicles a little domestic episode: "In this town, October 12, a female candidate for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup to James Harding, editor of this paper. Tonnage, ten pounds. This little incident suggests a conundrum: What is the difference between editorial and matrimonial experience? In the former the devil cries for 'copy.' In the latter the 'copy' cries like the devil."

The Foundling Mystery.

Columbia to Huntingdon, Greeting!

A few weeks ago we published an account of a foundling having been left in possession of Dr. E. J. and Nannie Greene of this place, on Saturday evening, the 15th ult. The Columbia Herald of last week, throws the following light on the subject, and to a great extent solves the mystery. It now remains to be discovered who the woman was that brought the child here:

From an event which recently transpired in our town, we think we can throw some light upon the origin of that baby, and give a clue at least, as to

"Who was her father?
Who was her mother?"

Some time in November last, a well-dressed individual, bearing the external semblance of a gentleman, came to Columbia in company with a young woman from Harrisburg. He made inquiries for a boarding house and was directed to the residence of a highly respectable gentleman named C——, at the corner of Second and Locust streets in this place. There he succeeded in obtaining board and lodging for the lady with him, whom he introduced as his wife—Mrs. Wilson. She was a small, delicate, and quite intellectual looking person, seemingly about sixteen or seventeen years of age. Mr. Wilson, as he called himself, made proper arrangements for the comfort of the lady, procuring a stove for her room and other nessaries, before leaving for Harrisburg. In answer to the question "why he did not obtain boarding there," he replied, "Oh, I wanted her away from the atmosphere of the capitol."

In the course of a few weeks (in December) the lady became a mother, a nurse was provided by our sweet-scented Benedict, and things generally went on swimmingly. Mr. Wilson was in ecstacies of delight; Mr. Wilson cooed forth his felicity over the hymenial nest like a turtle dove of the most amiable kind, and declared, "pon honor," that he had never seen so fine a baby—no, never! Of course he played the happy father to perfection, and led everybody to believe that he was the very pink, not to say carnation of good hubbies! In all his intercourse with the inmates of the house, he spoke of the lady as his wife—his dear Mrs. Wilson, etc., etc.

Subsequently, his visits, which had heretofore been quite regular, began to grow more unfrequent, and Mrs. Wilson to show signs of anxiety and care. From this, and other circumstances, Mrs. C——, the landlady, was led to suspect that there was an immense cat in this harmless looking meal tub, and she set about the work of uncovering the mystery.

She instituted inquiries, and learned, to her great astonishment and indignation, that Mr. Wilson was indeed not Mr. Wilson, and Mrs. Wilson, a quite different individual.—In short, Mr. Wilson proved to be a certain ——, empl yed in the —— Department at Harrisburg, and his victim, a child in years, a Miss ——, of the same city. Of course the proprietress of the house made out a clearance for the party, and, the "hubby" absconding, the lady was forced to leave with her baby. This she did on Friday, the 14th inst., leaving Columbia in the evening train for Harrisburg. At Middletown she was met by Mr. Wilson, who conveyed her to Harrisburg from that point.

It is a noticeable fact, that previously to leaving Columbia she bought a new willow basket, which, when she left, she carried with her, entirely empty. This —— is, as we have said, an employee of the —— Department, at Harrisburg, having a wife, and we believe, a family living in Dauphin Co. We should like to see the authorities of Dauphin county take this matter in hand, and bring these offenders against all laws—human and divine—to an account.

"We Want to See."

A business house in Harrisburg has a large card hanging outside the store door with "We Want to See" in large letters at the top of it, and then follows the names of dishonest customers who strayed away after they had run a bill on promise to pay. The idea is a good one, as every person passing by will want to know who is honest and who is dishonest, and the news will most likely reach the ears of those most interested and save the merchant the trouble of placing bills in the hands of proper officers for collection. We think all the merchants and shop keepers in Huntingdon, should adopt the Harrisburg merchant's idea and keep cards out during Sundays so that the good church-going people will not be deceived by hypocrites—dishonesty and religion wont mix.

Choice Selections.

Mrs Anna T. Randall, so favorably known in this community as a reader, has compiled with great care a large number of choice selections from the poets and prose writers, which she has had printed in book form, and now offers it to the public. The book is entitled "Reading and Election," and its prominent features are Principles, Gesture, Methods of Teaching, Selections in which forty nine American and thirty seven English authors are represented, of whom short but comprehensive sketches are given.—The book should be in every family and would be found to be of great service in the school room.

ROBBERY.—On Saturday last, while Mr. Geo. W. Warfel was busily engaged about his store at the express office, he removed his coat, containing a pocket-book with about $50.00 in money and a check for $95.00 in it, which was taken from the coat by some one who was evidently aware of the manner in which Mr. Warfel carried his money. The pocket-book was returned on Wednesday, the thief having placed it behind the door of his store, minus the $50.00 in greenbacks, but with the check and other papers untouched.—Philipsburg Journal.

Sales and Sale Bills.

The season for public sales of personal property is now coming on. To those of our readers in Huntingdon county who intend having sales, we would say—do not fail to advertise them in the Globe. It is the very best way of making the sale generally known with the least cost or trouble. The Globe circulates in every township, borough, village or hamlet in the county, and a notice of a sale in its columns is of more value than the printing of five thousand handbills. It goes to the houses of people and just hits those most likely to be buyers.

We are prepared to print bills for vendues, at short notice, as heretofore. Our handbills are beautifully illustrated with cuts, rendering them much more attractive, without costing any more in price. Vendue advertisements can be forwarded by mail, and they will be inserted in the Globe, or handbills printed and forwarded to the parties ordering, without the necessity of their visiting Huntingdon for that purpose Address

The Season

The oldest inhabitant is puzzled to call to his recollection a season similar to the present. Memory fails in cases of this kind. Each one may call to mind seasons in some respects like that which we now have— but in all respects none seem to come up to it. It is said of the winter of 1718 that on January 15, "the ice on the rivers had disappeared, and the frost was out of the ground. That for three weeks before the weather had been like spring, and peas, beans, &c, had been planted. But a week had scarcely elapsed before severe cold weather set in, and the rivers were filled with ice." Let us take heart from this. We have had thus far an unusually mild winter—but before it closes we may have a "spell of weather" that will set back vegetation, and give us ice as much as we want. As we write the sky is clouded, and the Heavens forebode a storm of some kind that may introduce an old-fashioned winter, notwithstanding all the signs to the contrary.

A REMARKABLE YEAR.—The year 1870 will be a very eventful one to every maiden who gets married. Throughout the whole course of the year, whenever the moon wanes the nights will grow dark. Whoever is in love will think his sweetheart an angel. Whoever gets married will find out whether it is true. If she dreams of a young man three nights in succession, it is a sign of something. If anybody jumps overboard without knowing how to swim, it is ten to one he gets drowned. If any one lends an umbrella, it is ten to one he is obliged to go home in the rain for his pains. More anon, as the "spirit moves."

FRANKLIN OUTDONE.—Ben. Frankin once wrote:

"He who by the plow would thrive,
Must himself either hold or drive."

These lines were very popular, in their day, and even now they are occasionally quoted by old fogies. But some person has eclipsed them by bringing out the following:

"He who by his biz would rise,
Must either bust or advertise."

HUNTINGDON, PA.

Advice as to Horses.

In teaching a young horse to drive well do not hurry to see how fast he can trot. Keep each pace clear and distinct from the other, that is in walking make him walk and do not allow him to trot. While trotting be equally careful that he keeps steady at his pace, and do not allow him to slack into a walk. The reins while driving should be kept snug, and when pushed to the top of his speed keep him well in hand, that he may learn well to bear upon the bit, so that when going at a high rate of speed he can be held at his pace; but do not allow him to pull too hard, for it is not only unpleasant, but makes him often difficult to manage.

To prevent halter-breaking, procure a small, hard, strong cord, from eight to ten feet long; put the harness on the horse, buckle the girth tight, make a slipping noose on one end of the cord and put it around the horse's tail close to the body; slip the other end through the territ and bit ring, and hitch the horse to a post, and leave him to himself. Two or three lessons will cure any horse.

When a horse stands long in a stable his legs are apt to swell. No horse which is not disabled by sickness or lameness should be allowed to stand long in the stable. Inaction produces a dropsical condition of the dependent parts of the body, and the obvious remedy is to exercise the horse every day.

To prevent over-reaching, pare the heel of the forward foot low. This causes the horse as he moves forward to raise the forward foot quicker, and allows the hind foot to remain longer, so that before the hind foot comes forward the forefoot is out of the way.—Also, make the forward shoe long. If my reason is not plain, let any one try the experiment and they will be satisfied.

KEEPING CATTLE IN THE STABLE.—One of our neighbors, however cold or stormy the weather, turns his cows out of the stables, and into a large meadow with a stream on the furthermost side, each winter day, at about nine o'clock, where they generally remain till four in the afternoon, when they are put up for the night.

His theory is that they want air and exercise. They get air, but rarely take the latter, for after finding their way back from the brook, the remainder of the day is generally spent with their tails turned toward the only shelter in the lot, and that is a wall on its northernmost side, about four feet high.

Our plan for years has been to give them say two hours out in mild winter days, but when it is cold and windy never more than one, and if it storms, only time to drink—a half hour at the most. This for the winter months.—When the milder March comes, and the cows are heavy with calf, we give them the range of an acre lot, well protected on its northern side, which furnishes them considerable shelter.

Our stables are well ventilated, and always well littered, and if we can gather anything from the desire of the cows to get back to their quarters after drinking, they are perfectly satisfied with the confinement. Certain it is that our cows have come out in better condition in the spring since this practice was adopted than ever before, and the cost of keeping has been estimated from five to ten per cent. less.

☞ A correspondent suggests that the best plan to clear weedy land of seeds is to keep ploughing it. Each time the furrows are turned, a new lot of seeds come to the surface, and of course germinate, and when turned under, die; and thinks that a whole season given to a lot will more than pay the cost of ploughing some half dozen times, and the loss of the land for the year.

We presume that our friend's plan would decrease largely the quantity of weeds that would spring up after any stirring of the surface-soil; but if each farmer would always remember that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and keep his fields absolutely clean when in crops, there would be no need of losing a year's products, and the labor of four or five ploughings.—Hearth and Home.

THE CALVES:—There is an old story of a man who fed his calves with meadow-hay tea, congratulating himself that they would thrive on it, because they had never been accustomed to any thing better, with very indifferent success.

Calves need care; should be carded every day; should have easy access to water, and, above all things, should have the best of hay so arranged that they can get it without wasting it, or covering it with filth by getting it under their feet. A little meal so placed that they can lick it up with a little sprinkling of salt, at least every other day, will pay the cost at least a dozen-fold.

SHELTER FOR SHEEP.—Sheep, above all other stock, need to be kept dry.—One cold rain-storm that saturates the wool costs the farmer more than the interest on a respectable shelter for a year. An open hovel facing the south is better than nothing, and even if the north side of the shelter is simply a pile of brush or a coarse log fence, it will do: anything to break the wind. The roof of the hovel may be slabs or old boards, or poles, with a pile of old hay on the top.

LORILLARD'S "EUREKA" SMOKING TOBACCO. is an excellent article of granulated Virginia, wherever introduced it is universally admired. It is put up in handsome muslin bags, in which orders for Meerchaum Pipes are daily packed.

LORILLARD'S "Yacht Club" SMOKING TOBACCO. classed by all who consume it as the "finest of all." It is made of the choicest leaf grown; it is anti-nervous in its effects, as the Nicotine has been extracted; it leaves no disagreeable taste after smoking; it is very mild, light in color and in weight, hence one pound will last as long as 3 of ordinary tobacco. In this brand we also pack orders every day for first class Meerchaum Pipes. Try it, and convince yourselves it is all it claims to be, "The Finest of All."

LORILLARD'S CENTURY CHEWING TOBACCO. This brand of fine Cut chewing tobacco has no equal or superior anywhere. It is without doubt the best chewing tobacco in the country.

LORILLARD'S SNUFFS have now been in general use in the United States over 110 years and still acknowledged "the best," wherever used.

If your storekeeper does not have these articles for sale, ask him to get them; they are sold by respectable jobbers almost everywhere.
